Conversations On Dying: A Palliative-Care Pioneer Faces His Own Death
The story of the end-of-life experience of a palliative care physician who helped thousands of patients to die well. We all die. Most of us spend the majority of our lives ignoring this uncomfortable truth, but Dr. Larry Librach dedicated his life and his career to helping his patients navigate their final journey. Then, in April 2013, Larry was diagnosed with terminal pancreatic cancer. Unlike the majority of us, Larry knew the death he wanted. He wanted to die at home, surrounded by his family: his wife of forty years, his children, and his grandchildren. He did. He was peaceful and calm at the end. Larry proved that the “good death” isn’t a myth. It can be done, and he showed us how. Ever the teacher, Larry made his last journey a teachable moment on how to die the best death possible, even with a pernicious disease. As hard as it is to guide patients toward dying well, it is far harder to live those precepts day by day as the clock ticks down to one’s own death, but Larry, together with author Phil Dwyer, chronicled his final journey with courage and humour.

Synopsis

The story of the end-of-life experience of a palliative care physician who helped thousands of patients to die well. We all die. Most of us spend the majority of our lives ignoring this uncomfortable truth, but Dr. Larry Librach dedicated his life and his career to helping his patients navigate their final journey. Then, in April 2013, Larry was diagnosed with terminal pancreatic cancer. Unlike the majority of us, Larry knew the death he wanted. He wanted to die at home, surrounded by his family: his wife of forty years, his children, and his grandchildren. He did. He was peaceful and calm at the end. Larry proved that the “good death” isn’t a myth. It can be done, and he showed us how. Ever the teacher, Larry made his last journey a teachable moment on how to die the best death possible, even with a pernicious disease. As hard as it is to guide patients toward dying well, it is far harder to live those precepts day by day as the clock ticks down to one’s own death, but Larry, together with author Phil Dwyer, chronicled his final journey with courage and humour.

Book Information

Paperback: 216 pages
Publisher: Dundurn (May 10, 2016)
Language: English
ISBN-10: 145973193X
Product Dimensions: 6 x 0.5 x 9 inches
Shipping Weight: 12 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)
Average Customer Review: 5.0 out of 5 stars See all reviews (5 customer reviews)
Best Sellers Rank: #381,083 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #70 in Books > Health, Fitness & Dieting > Aging > Medical Conditions & Diseases #620 in Books > Health, Fitness & Dieting > Diseases & Physical Ailments > Cancer #716 in Books > Self-Help > Relationships > Love & Loss

Customer Reviews

Given the main message is that we spend far too little time talking about death, you might reasonably expect that this is not a book with much appeal. In fact, there is much to commend it. Not just the skillful, straight-forward writing and the sensitive tone, but the sheer depth of the research. You come away feeling well informed about the event none of us can avoid. A superficial appeal rests with the main premise - a leading Canadian expert on death and dying shares intimate details of his own demise from a fast-acting cancer. But once you get past that headline-writer’s dream, you find the narrative framework of the doctor’s last months are well upholstered with insight and statistics, colour and spirituality. In fact, the exact details of his death are not revealed. There was a limit to access gained by the author. He wasn’t there to report the death rattle, assuming there was one. However, we get a pretty good idea of what must have taken place from a gruelling description the writer’s brother provides of the last moments of their older brother’s death in a grim nursing home in England just a short time before. One if the key messages is that despite advances in medical science, there is a still a wide chasm separating the way most practitioners handle a life’s ending and the wishes of patients and families. This story helps - if you’re up to contemplating something that for most people is too ghastly to think about.

Conversations on Dying (Dundurn, 2016), by Phil Dwyer is a necessary book. Although its subject matter, end of life and palliative care, is difficult, Conversations on Dying is not. The intertwining of clinical fact, personal anecdote and the conversation of the title with a pioneer of palliative care brings to the subject a rare humour and humanity. A wonderful book to begin the conversation with, if you find yourself already in the midst of the discussion, Conversations on Dying is the friend who has been through it before and will help you on the journey. - Full disclosure - I read the book in an early version as well as the published one. It only became better with each reading. I wish that I had Conversations on Dying when I went through the long process of death with my grandmother.

I bought the book partly because, full disclosure, Phil and I worked together 15 years ago, but also because I’m interested in hospice and palliative medicine topics. I’m glad I read it. I’m the digital director at an ad agency with a number of health care clients, and I do some work with palliative care and hospice care providers. It can be a struggle for me because my priorities are usually arranged to generate new patient volumes â commerce â whereas palliative care physicians (more so than most physicians) seem averse to viewing what they do as a commercial enterprise. We talk past each other, a lot. Conversations on Dying does a lot to provide a history and a context for palliative care in Canada and the UK, and it helped me connect some dots about how it works in the US, where I live. I think I’ll do a better job of communicating with palliative physicians in the future, and that alone justifies reading the book. But the book does a lot more than that. Phil does a great job of presenting Larry Librach as a vibrant person with an important legacy. Larry’s dying, of course, and dying is sad. The book conveys the distress so many (including Phil) felt at Larry Librach’s death â the process of his dying â and it is emotionally powerful. I have a habit of reading books in bars and more than a few times, sitting on a stool at a bar, I had to clench and unclench my jaw to keep the tears at bay, because it’s one thing to read a book at a bar but quite another to cry at a bar. So, bottom line: I liked it. It was worthwhile and touching. I’ll probably read it again in a few months.

Informative and deeply moving, Dwyer weaves stories of his brother’s harrowing end of life with lessons and insights from a pioneer in palliative care who faces his own untimely death. In asking what constitutes a good death, Dwyer provides an engaging and elegant examination of the challenges we face, both as individuals and as a society, while deftly illustrating how palliative care possesses the tools and skills to relieve suffering for a humane, respectful passing. The urgency of this issue is undeniable. For example, despite forty-two years of formalized, quality palliative care in Canada, only 15% of Canadians who need it are lucky enough to receive it. This is a stark reality, where ignorance, lack of political will, and outdated health-care models deprive the dying of what should be a fundamental and guaranteed human right: the right to a humane, dignified, and gentle end of life. Conversations on Dying provides a compelling, insightful, and timely contribution to this crucial issue that all of us will face.

Excellent

Download to continue reading...

Conversations on Dying: A Palliative-Care Pioneer Faces His Own Death On Death and Dying: What the Dying Have to Teach Doctors, Nurses, Clergy and Their Own Families On Death and Dying: What the Dying Have to Teach Doctors, Nurses, Clergy, and Their Own Family Care of the Imminently Dying (HPNA Palliative Nursing Manuals) DYING TO REALLY LIVE: Finally, an After Death Survivor returns from deeply into life after death (NDEs - Life After Death? Series Book 1) Between Death and Life - Conversations with a Spirit: An internationally acclaimed hypnotherapist’s guide to past lives, guardian angels and the death experience Cuidados Paliativos / Palliative Care: Recomendaciones Terapéuticas Para Atención Primaria / Treatment Guidelines for Primary Care (Spanish Edition) Palliative Care Nursing, Fourth Edition: Quality Care to the End of Life Palliative Care Nursing: Quality Care to the End of Life, 2nd Edition AACN Protocols For Practice: Palliative Care And End-Of-Life Issues In Critical Care Conversaciones con Hans Ulrich Obrist / Conversations with Hans Ulrich Obrist (Conversaciones / Conversations) (Spanish Edition) Conversations with Walter Mosley (Literary Conversations Series) Conversations with Toni Morrison (Literary Conversations) Orchids Care Bundle 3 in 1, THE NEW EDITION: Orchids + Orchids Care For Hobbyists + Phalaenopsis Orchids Care (Orchids Care, House Plants Care, Gardening
Techniques Book 4) Cats: Cat Care: Kitten Care: How To Take Care Of And Train Your Cat Or Kitten (Complete Guide To Cat Care & Kitten Care With Pro Training Grooming & Nutrition Tips) When Professionals Weep: Emotional and Countertransference Responses in End-of-Life Care (Series in Death, Dying, and Bereavement) Make Your Own Cosmetics: Recipes, Skin Care, Body Care, Hair Care, Perfumes, and Fragrancing, Herbs, Essential Oils, Cosmetic Ingredients... (Neal's Yard Remedies) Homesteading for Beginners: Self-sufficiency guide, Grow your own food, Repair your own home, Raising Livestock and Generating your own Energy (Homesteading, ... Start Your Own Corporation: Why the Rich Own Their Own Companies and Everyone Else Works for Them (Rich Dad Advisors) Palliative Care Perspectives